Biography

Dr. Lauren Anstey is an eLearning and Curriculum Specialist at the Teaching Support Centre and was appointed in May 2016 to the Faculty of Education as Adjunct Research Faculty in the Centre for Research in Teaching and Learning in Higher Education. Dr. Anstey completed her PhD in Education from Queen’s University in March of 2016, where her focus was upon Authentic Inquiry Learning for undergraduate anatomy education. Her research interests range from anatomy education and authentic inquiry learning; to technology-enhanced student engagement and eLearning tool evaluation; to educational development centre evaluation practices. Overall, through her research and educational development activities, Dr. Anstey strives towards an ongoing pursuit to engage in and support authentic, well-designed experiences of university teaching and learning.

Publications

For more on Dr. Anstey’s scholarship, please see http://lmanstey.blogspot.ca/p/scholarship.html