Dr. Karen Pashby

Understanding and resourcing ethical global issues pedagogy: Reflecting on ‘participatory’ research with teachers in England, Finland, and Sweden

In this talk, Dr. Karen Pashby will review a methodology that she and her colleagues have used to guide projects working with teachers, and she will share some findings from those projects. The projects aimed to both support praxis and contribute to empirical and theoretical research in the intersecting fields of critical global citizenship education and environmental and sustainability education. Dr. Pashby will raise some of the challenges and possibilities of this methodological approach.

Karen Pashby is Professor of Global Citizenship Education at Manchester Metropolitan University and School of Education Department Co-Lead for Research, and President of the Comparative International Education Society of Canada (2023-2025). An experienced secondary school educator and teacher educator, her research draws on decolonial theoretical resources to examine how to engage productive pedagogical tensions in reflexive approaches to ethical global issues. Projects funded by the Academy of Finland, British Academy, Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, and Swedish Research Council have involved participatory research with teachers in Canada, England, Finland, and Sweden.
